

Job Description

Job Title:	Project Worker – Raising Awareness of Gambling Harms in S. Asian Communities
Responsible To:	Gambling Services Manager
Direct Reports:	N/A
Based:	Bristol
Salary:	£22,920 - £27,540 (35hrs p/w, 18 Month Contract)

Role Purpose

The role of the Project Worker for this pilot project is to reduce gambling harm inequalities within South Asian communities, across our geographic areas of Bristol, Wales, Wiltshire, Gloucestershire, Bath and North Somerset.

The project worker will need to develop links through partnership and collaboration within Cultural and Linguistically Diverse communities, and over an 18-month period reduce gambling harms in South Asian communities by:

- Implementing a culturally appropriate train-the-trainer model to deliver gambling harm reduction education
- Increasing knowledge of gambling harm and treatment options among the South Asian population
- Improving referral pathways to treatment for those experiencing harms

Key responsibilities/accountabilities

The project worker will deliver the aims of the South Asian project pilot through extensive outreach work, identifying and contacting stakeholders within the relevant communities within our geographic remit. The 2011 census showed Bristol alone as having around 7,000 Pakistani, 6,500 Indian, and 4,000 other residents identifying as Asian. Research suggests that gamblers and affected others experiencing gambling harms from these communities are less likely to seek treatment, and more likely to suffer additional harm through guilt, shame, and stigma within their communities. This 'paradox of harm' means that fewer people from BAME communities may experience problem gambling than the general population, the harm they do experience is intensified, and help is harder to find.
